A Million Steps: The Best Journey Yet

By Hana Hibri's own admission being a tomboy when she was a little girl was the norm. As the years passed to womanhood, adventure was left behind until, that is, her mountaineering husband invited her on a hiking trip to the Rockies for a 30-day expedition. Despite never stepping into a tent or donning a backpack, Hana accepted the offer. Misery ensued. Yet this very trip eventually ignited a flame within her and Hana fell into the rhythm of the great outdoors.
